Ruth Ewan: Rewriting the City

The tour is to be written by the traveller. The city is a page, the traveller is a pencil and through a series of journeys any words can be spelled out.

Ruth's tour is an imaginary tour rather than a physical one. It works with the iconic Harry Beck Tube Map (still used by London Underground today, although updated to reflect changes in the network) and invites you to spell words out across the city using specific routes that create individual letters. For example, to create the letter A, follow the following stations with a pencil: New Cross, Shadwell, Greenwich, Canary Wharf, Canada Water. Like a dot-to-dot drawing that guides the pencil, this tour lets you create letters via a series of routes plotted on stations across the network. Use the allotted routes to create letters and spell your own words across London.
